Dear Dyrce,

I have just received your letter of March 25. You are quite right, I have a number of projects ongoing simultaneously.

In looking back, I see that it was in November of last year that I received your first manuscript, and I still have not had the opportunity to review the very rough translation that I was able to obtain. I hope you will continue to be patient.

Of course I am willing to review the present manuscript of Celonia, but if too is in Portuguese it will be as the earlier one, difficult to get translated. And consequently it may be some time before I can do justice to it. It might be helpful if you were to also send some representative specimens of each species, as I do not have much experience with species of this genus.

With best wishes and regards,

Sincerely,

Patsy A. McLaughlin
